Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I do not feel that the proposed settlement will solve the problem, nor will it prevent Microsoft from continuing to follow monopolistic practices. The settlement is full of "legalese" that has been carefully crafted with definitions and provisions that, on the surface look like they do one thing, but when you look at the real issue, find out that they do something else. Many of the definitions are too narrow to apply to many current Microsoft products, while minor modifications to other products will remove them from the list of items "covered" by the settlement.
